

A mother's day gift

This year, I wanted to get Mom something truly special for Mother's Day.

Flowers? Too [1_____]. Chocolate? Too [2_____].

No, this year she deserves a gift as unique as she is. Something that says, "I love you, and I also remember that time you [3_____]."

First, I made her a handmade [4_____], using nothing but [5_____] and glue.

Then I wrapped it in [6_____] and added a tag that said, "For the world's most [7_____] mom."

But that wasn't enough. I knew what she really wanted was some peace and quiet, so I gave her one whole hour without [8_____], [9_____], or anyone asking her to [10_____].

Still, I wanted to do more. So I made her a crown out of [11_____], prepared a breakfast of [12_____], and read her a dramatic poem about [13_____].

She cried (in a good way) and said it was even better than the year I gave her a [14_____].

So here's to you, Mom. The only person on earth who would still hug me after I [15_____].
